VERY IMPORTANT

At some point between the beginning of the postulant's third semester of study and the acceptance of candidacy, dependent on the individual's progress and discerned "readiness," the Bishop will assign a field placement. This placement is carefully chosen by the Bishop, a decision which is preceded by his/her consultation with all who have been part of the individual's formation process. During this time, the individual is to register for the Field Placement Course. This course, offered in the School for Deacons, must be taken by all who aspire to ordination in the diocese, regardless of whether they have matriculated in the School for Deacons or some other preapproved program. The Bishop will also designate the length of his assignment, and their hopes and expectations during this important phase of formation.
